FIRST OIL WELLS.

Some of the great discoveries of the world have been by accident and some of the mightiest discoveries in the production of oil seem a little short of miraculous. Col. Drake in August, 1859, discovered oil with the most feeble and inadequate efforts about 6 miles South of Titusville, in a Pennsylvania wilderness. His well was about 33 feet deep and a well of similar depth anywhere else in Pennsylvania (which has produced millions and millions of barrels of oil and changed the commercial aspect of the East) would not have found oil at all. It was just the spot, the exact point in many thousand square miles of territory that would get oil at 33 feet.

California has a similar discovery of an oil well. The state has been called the kingdom of fruits and flowers and her manufactures languished because she has no cheap fuel with which to compete with other manufactured products of the world. Coal is from $7.50 to $14.00 per ton. She has no wood to speak of and no native coal worthy of serious consideration.

It is true there has been oil seepages, oil wells, tar deposits, asphaltum, even live oil. There have been oil refineries to manufacture and refine the crude production of the former small oil production for years. In May, 1890, two wood-choppers, the Elwoods, commenced to dig for oil on the banks of Kern River. They were two poor wood-choppers with a faith deserving of immortality, and they commenced and dug a 43 foot well and bored, not drilled, 20 feet further; the oil rushed in and chased them out of the hole. It led to this tremendous supply of fuel oil which is changing the manufacturing and motive power of California. The supply seems exhaustless. It is safe to say that there is not another spot in the San Joaquin valley (300 mile long and an average of 80 miles wide) wherein one could dig or drill a well that would have produced oil in paying quantities at that depth or that would lead to the tremendous development that followed.

A SUIT FOR ONE FOOT OF LAND.

Milwaukee Sentinel.
Kenosha, Wis.—A unique suit was started in this city this afternoon, the matter in litigation being one foot of ground in Main street, on which the walls of a two story building are now standing. A short time ago Dr. Geo. Pugh and Thomas O'Neill purchased lots on Main street adjoining each other. O'Neill started the erection of a large store building, and when he built the north wall it is claimed that he took in a foot of Pugh's property. The wall had been completed, but this morning Pugh caused an injunction to be issued against O'Neill by Court Commissioner McDowell, and demands that the wall be removed. Should the suit be decided in favor of Pugh it will be necessary for the big wall to be torn down.
